President's Report

By Hank Ebbelaar

First of all I hope all of you had a very nice Thanksgiving Day with your families. I am not much of a composer, so I have not had much to write very often. I have heard over the years, that without a bulletin, you can't have much of a club. I tend to agree with that. But one person can't put out a bulletin without some help from other members.

I received 10 years of APJ, from another pigeon fancier, for which I am very grateful. They were published in the 1970's. From one of the APJ's I picked out a few articles written by the late Fred Smith. I found them very interesting as some of the problems with the club, continue to be problems today. I have some pictures of the bird that won the Western Sectional in 2012 that was held in California.

Then we had the Western Sectional in Kennewick, WA this fall. Two of the birds were Medium faced plain head & short faced crested, won champion of both shows. Both birds were owned by Dennis Manning. (Congratulations Dennis). Last year I judged the western Sectional and this year Pavel Lutsenko of Canada judged the western Sectional. Pavel is also the district 9 director. The winner of the m/f crested is Mike La Com of California. He has come a long way with his birds. He has been doing a lot of winning with his birds. I understand they just had a district show in District 1 in California. Mike had the first 7 birds in the final lineup. Way to go Mike.

A few weeks ago the 9th district had a show. I believe there were just over 100 birds there. I judged the show and Pavel Lutsenko had the best MF crested Helmet, with a small typey compact hen. The color was not the best, but good enough for the win. Ernie Silveri had best young m/f plain head with a nice typey red young hen. Dennis Manning had best s/f crested with a red old cock. Three members of the 2nd district showed up in Canada with their birds. I know that years ago Dennis Bray showed up in Canada. There is some talk about having the western Sectional in Canada.

As most of you know the national for 2014 will be in Oklahoma City, OK. I have already purchased my ticket to get there. It still remains to be seen if I will be showing any birds there. Getting them there is not a problem if you ship by mail. But getting them home again is another matter. Boxing them up to ship them home on Saturday afternoon and get them to your house on Wednesday or Thursday is way too long. The members of the AHA who have been members for Many years remember Fred Smith who recently passed away. Some of us have decided to have a yearly memorial award in Fred's name for the best Short faced Crested Helmet at our annual show at the national.

I know this is all about the western part of the country, but I have talked to a couple of guys from the Midwest and back east, and I have heard NOTHING back. Fellow members we can't write anything unless you get in touch with someone.

Till next time.
Hank

Central VP Report

By Bob Lien

Come on Spring!

What a long cold winter we're having here in Nebraska. Not a lot of snow, but some of the coldest temps we've had in a long time.

My wife and I made the trip to the Oklahoma Nationals. The weather was perfect that week with temps in the 60 you never know what you might run into this time of year, but all went well. There was a nice showing of good quality helmets. Congratulations to all the winners and a big thanks to Bob Dunlap for judging the show. I hope that will encourage him to get back into the helmets.

I really enjoyed the time spent with all of the people in the club and especially the great dinner at the Cattlemen's Steak House. For those of you who know Mr. Garus, there was never a dull moment. Thanks for keeping us entertained, Mr. Garus.

I'm glad to report we picked up a few new members and looking forward to seeing them at future shows. Welcome to the Helmet club!

I put my birds together the last week of January and have a lot of eggs due to hatch later this week. Good luck to all this breeding season. Looking forward to seeing everyone at next year's nationals.

Secretary's Report

By Greg Bliven

Another show season down and breeding season started. I've had some birds together since about the beginning of March and most already have eggs. I wasn't able to make it to the National this year, but hopefully everyone had a good time. Sorry it has taken so long to get everything together and put into the bulletin, but this will be my last time putting it together. I have no problem if someone wants to create the file and send it to me for printing and mailing, but with the secretary job it is just too much for me to do the bulletin also. My wife is in school and that leaves me to take care of the kids after work and I just don't have the time to do it anymore. So if there are any volunteers let me know.

District 1 Report

By K. Mike LaCom

Hopefully, everyone enjoyed the past show season as much as I did. It does seem to ALWAYS go too fast for the amount of effort involved. The only show I did not attend as planned was Hurricane. However, the Pacific Northwest was special last fall for the Sectional, Oklahoma was a first for me, and the California Pageant was wet and cold. It is hard to imagine that it was wet and cold in Nov. as it has been anything but that since! Maybe the California breeding season will be as "hot" as the weather!

I would like to welcome Aubrey Garcia to the AHA. Aubrey is no stranger to raising pigeons but this is her first try with Helmets. Currently home and pigeons are in the Phoenix, Az. area as she is in her last semester at ASU. Her hopes are to have some young MFC's at the Ontario National. Welcome aboard!

Speaking of the next National, the LAPC is hoping to top 10,000 birds which I believe would be one of the largest Nationals... remember no Pageant this year. In talking with many AHA members 300 plus Helmets seems very possible. I know we will have a good judging area ready for your birds and auction. As always, Leonard, Chet and I look forward to our times together. Stay healthy and save some $$ for shipping and travel!

Have a good breeding season!
Raise a Champion!

Plain heads

By Dennis Manning

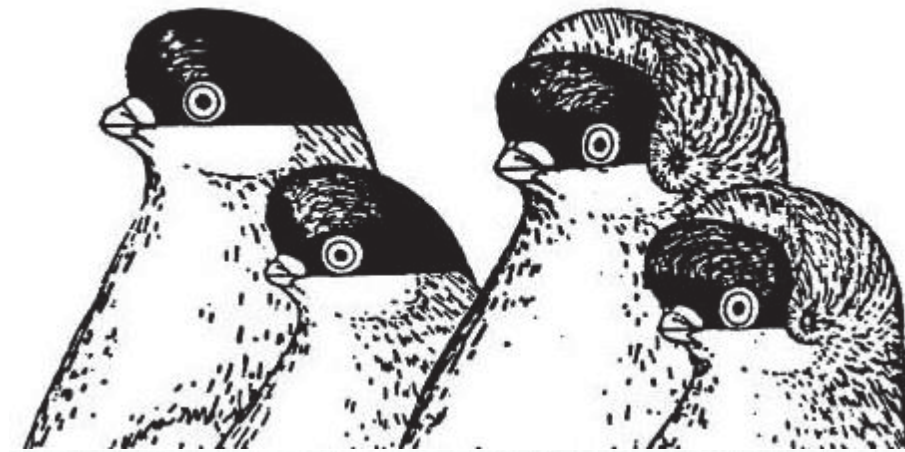

The American Helmet Association Plain Head both medium faced and short faced are not just crestless versions of the crested varieties. Often people make that assumption and judge the birds accordingly. That is a mistake and does not add to the advancement of the breed. The marking are considerably different as unlike the crested birds the color line needs to go around the back of the head in a straight line. If the crested birds had that marking their crests would be half colored. For that reason crosses between the two often render plain headed birds that are half capped. A half capped bird is a bird with a marking line that ends behind the eye and makes a right angle up and over the top of the head where the crested birds' color line would be. This should always be considered a serious fault as head markings for the Plain head are valued much higher at 14 points than those of a crested bird. If you do not have a straight line that runs between the two beak mandibles and straight back to the back of the head you do not have a correctly marked Plain head and the point deductions should be less if the marking line is at least trying to make a straight line and much greater if the marking line makes right angles and cuts over the top.

I see this overlooked by judges sometimes and it bothers me greatly. I would rather see leniency for a slightly over marked Plain head than a half capped bird. The standard asks us to apply the standard while viewing the accompanying ideal drawing. The ideal drawing shows an entire bird not just a head, standing in show station with its eyes over its feet. That is the view a judge should use to determine the line of marking on the head. Some of my competitors show birds with more back skull feather than others. I have heard judges after taking those birds in hand remark that the marking line is too far back (over marked). That is an incorrect view of the bird. That marking should be judged with the bird in full show station per our standard. Often the longer back skull feathered bird's marking line which may have appeared to be over marked in the hand will again appear to be in a straight line when in the show pose. While I am of the belief that our standard requires less back skull than some show today, Standard: "There should definitely be more front than back skull. Top skull should not be lacking." I don't like to see birds with more back skull improperly discounted for over mark when that marking is perfectly correct at show stance.

The Plain head will tend to accentuate a down set beak more than a crested bird. Without the eye catching crest the head shape is more obvious on a Plain head and the beak setting more pronounced. Beak setting does not equally affect both crested and plain headed varieties. The Standard calls for a straight set beak, without it the whole form and station of the helmet changes. I believe that a judge, properly using the standard should have his decision about the overall bird affected by the lack of a straight set beak. Our Standard makes the following point "It is strongly suggested that this Standard be read with the accompanying drawings in view. At times, difficult to explain or understand characteristics are best left to the Ideal Drawing”.

Standard: “It should be set straight with an imaginary line passing between the mandibles to the bottom of the eye cere and through the center of the rosette”

The picture to the left has obviously been altered but only the beak setting. As you can see not just the angle of the beak has changed but so has the marking line and the eye placement. This I think is a good illustration of what happens when the beak is down set. This has a greater impact on the Plain head points than on the Crested although I believe it is detrimental to both.

The plain head is required to have a marking line that runs through the mandibles under the eye and around the back of the head in a straight line. A down face effectively wipes out the head marking points which are significant on a Plain head. There are 14 points at stake and a down face pretty much takes all 14 away as the line is now up to the eye and then back or down to the back skull. The eye points while only 4 are also at risk as eye placement is part of it and that placement is now wrong with the down set beak. The 6 beak points are seriously diminished because of course the down set beak is contrary to the Standard.

As you can see the head on the Plain head while not altered in the drawing now appears flatter in the front as a result of the down set beak. The rise is changed because of the incorrect angle of the beak and many points should be deducted based on this. The Plain head carries more head points at 12 than the crested bird so the impact is greater.

Type is also more valuable for a Plain head than it is for a crested bird. The standard pays 17 points to a Plain head as opposed to 15 for a crested bird. This requires our judges to consider type more carefully. Our Plain heads should fit the size box of 8” tall X 7 ½” long. They should be 8” high when they are at full station, eyes over the feet. A crouching bird or a bird standing flat footed with its head well forward of its feet but still holds its head at or below 8” is not of correct height or type. The Plain head should be round bodied with its wings and tail tips measured from the front of its chest, a full ½” shorter than it is tall. That ½” should be obvious to the judge as it can only be obtained when in show stance. I believe that if a bird is slightly shorter or taller than 8”, if it stands with its eyes over its feet up on its toes and appears to be taller than it is long then the height measurement is not as serious a deficit. That bird should get its type points. I believe that if a bird standing with proper type blows out over 9” it is clearly just too big and offends the type requirement.

My conclusion is this, Plain heads must be judged differently than crested birds. Our judges need to consider marking with a very critical eye as we have placed a lot of value in the standard on marking. Our judges need to be keenly aware of beak setting and the impact it has on marking, head and type. Type it can't be stressed enough. The Plain head should be compared to the ideal drawing and our judges should demand that our birds get up on their toes and perform or they should not get the type consideration in points. All of this is of course is only relevant to the competition at any show. We are not rating our birds, but rather comparing them, so if none are standing correctly then you will have a winner that does not stand correctly. If all are 9" + birds when in their show stance then we will have a champion that is 9" + but if consideration is given correctly to the standard and its requirements our judges can drive us all in the right direction.

Helmet Happenings

The Economy and Us: Needless to say with the inflation and the prices of gasoline, pigeon feed, entry expenses, and shipping costs, the fancy is taking it on the chin. This is reflected by the drastic slump in local show attendance where no specialty shows are sponsored. It seems that time has come to economize on a few luxuries and the pigeon shows are feeling the pinch. Many fellows simply aren't interested in spending the money for entries where the judge may never have bred his breed and the awards may be only a trophy or a rosette at best. For this reason, fellows are saving up for those two or three major meets a year. We note this here in the Midwest by the support of the Louisville, Peoria, Wisconsin State, and Iowa State shows, while most of the other shows have taken a big drop in attendance and entry. Solution to this seems to be, follow the pattern of the bigger shows or reducing the entry fee to become more competitive. The day of the $1 entry fee local show certainly seems to be numbered. Adding to this economy pinch is the limitations of 50 bird Helmet meets and a minimum of 25 per variety to qualify for Master Breeder points. This area is likewise afflicted by smaller loft populations, and reduction in entry birds which in reality makes some areas almost an impossibility to achieve this number. There has been some talk in reducing this number of qualifying points to 15 per variety and 20 total. However, some are concerned that this reduction would cut the value of the award itself as time goes by. The solution seems to be, committee work on the MB program in the near future and hope they have it ironed out well in advance of 1976 show season.

Old Reliable Mollies: With the breeding season in full swing in warmer areas and Mid-western birds just getting started I often come across a comment once made by Jim Joyner of Kemorner Tumbler fame. Jim once said, "If a pair is clicking, the fanciers' a fool to break them up and try for something better." I would have to agree, yet there are many instances yearly where a good pair produced quality youngsters and we think to ourselves, "We could do better if we put dad on the daughter and mother on the son, then we'd get better quality yet." Occasionally this happens but more often as not, the quality slips from the original pair and all a fancier has to show for the year's efforts is, "Now why did I do that?" This is a time of year to ask yourself this question, not in late July after the breeding year is spent. Something to think about!

By RAY ORBACH, Sinking Spring, Pa.

This month I will try to give a summary on Shortface Helmets as I see them. At the National Show, again they were judged by H. Stangel, who did a fine job. He picked a little red cock owned by Tony Patti. Many Shortface Helmets were shown by other breeders, among them, Brovaski, Seip, Sanchez, Gravel, to name a few.

I did notice that many birds lacked what I call a good skull or head and beak setting. They had good color and type, but many were in want of a good crest. Well, through my years of experience in breeding them, I've found that this cannot be accomplished and still maintain all the qualities needed in a good Shortface crested bird.

The best Shortface Helmets were originally brought here from the deceased breeder Mr. Copenhagen, by Bob Powell of Long Island, who does not now keep any pigeons whatsoever. The birds were sold to Tom and Tony Prieto, who did wonders with them and now with the passing of Tom Prieto, I wonder if the birds will still be bred on.

I know that many of the present day breeders still have birds of this stud, and they are trying to breed them as the Prieto's had. The many good breeders such as Uno, Clemens, Erbach, and many others have passed on. The many breeders that have kept them around here are Ed Deltiquilla, Bravaski, Gallagher, Patti, Gravel, and many others that I cannot think of at present.

I can see that many birds now have good color and markings, but lack a good short, stout beak, necessary for the full roundness of the head. Heads should have a good rise off the wattle, short and round from all angles. To do this you must acquire the best Helmet you have and cross to a good Beinaugen or Ancient, and work them until you come up to the head and beak points.

One thing a breeder should remember, is that you must "build your house before you paint it". That is why crossing with other breeds may hurt your color temporarily, but you will still get the fine points in head and beak. Remember, that these birds are also Shortface Tumblers, and at one time or another, were used for improving one or the other.

CHAMPION HELMET

This Black MP Helmet hen, Bird No. NPA 254813 was the Champion MP Helmet at the 1974 National Young Bird Show held in Louisville, Ky., with Fred Smith judging. Also Champion MP Helmet in District 4 Local Show held in August 1975 with G. E. Mann judging. This bird bred and owned by Janet Leckie of Remora, Mich. who started in Helmets in 1971 with a nice pair from Gordon Gehrke. This past year Janet banded nearly 300 young birds from 22 working pairs. — Photo from Fred Smith, Henderson, Ill.

I'm Back

By James Jensen

It has been just about two years since I sold all my pigeons preparatory to serving a mission with my wife for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints. My wife and I returned home in January, I had surgery on my foot, and now it is time for pigeons again. Many thanks to Steve Mitchell, Mike LaCom, Jim Garus and Leonard Patito for helping me to get back into helmets.

After raising MFC helmets for several decades and fighting the problems we now have with them, I have decided to keep fewer birds and concentrate on one color. I am going to take on the project of trying to raise competitive duns. Because it is difficult to find a competitive Dun, I have acquired several blacks, a couple of yellows and a couple of dun hens to begin the project. I was delighted to be able to get back three birds that I had raised a couple of years ago for this project. I expect this year to not only raise duns, but blacks, reds and yellows. From these I should have a lot of birds carrying dilute and more duns to choose from for next year's breeding. I am planning to show at the national this year. It will be fun to see what I can do in a startup year. I look forward to seeing old friends once again. May I add a challenge to you to try raising some duns to show against me this year? I think this is a neglected color with some inherent challenges. It will be fun to develop it.

It is nice to hear pigeons cooing in the morning as I wake up once again. I have enjoyed these birds for most of my life. It has also been nice to connect with friends in the hobby.

Good luck to you in the breeding pen. See you at the shows.

Western Vice President: _____
Central Vice President: _____
Eastern Vice President: _____
District Director: # _____
Points Director: _____
Publicity Director: _____
Bulletin Editor: _____

Please check with the members to make sure they are willing to do the job before nominating them. These nominations must be received by July 1 to comply with our Constitution and By-Laws.

Also if only one name is put down, it is an automatic, so make sure you vote for someone who will represent your district or region and are active in the club. Since everything has to go through the board of directors, let's pick officers that will take projects on and go to shows. For District Director, you only vote for your District, so put down what District you are in and who you want to vote for. If you don't know what district you are in, leave it blank and I will fill it in for you.
