President's Report

By Jim Garus

It's time for some Helmet news! I'm hoping you had a good breeding season and getting ready for the National. Personally, I have bred enough but it is difficult to see how they will finish in damp Oregon. We all know they can be hard to raise and even harder to be ready for a show. Mine will not be ready and I probably will not attend the National. I hear many members are looking forward to attending the National and I wish you well!

I continue to ask for more involvement from club members. We all like to attend shows and visit but there is a lot more to be done in running a club. Too few are doing too much while others do too little. 10 years ago a couple of us stepped up and filled the void but NO ONE has offered to take over. This bulletin is a good example with articles from Jensen, Manning, Strawniak, LaCom and Garus WE are all over 70 years old. There has been ONE encouraging development with the establishment of a historian position in the AHA. Andy Hansen has volunteered for this position and will be assisted by Pavel Lutsenko. I know there is a lot of Helmet info available from many of our long time members. THANK YOU ANDY!

My closing thoughts find me concerned with the direction of our breed. I love MFC's....however, according to our standard, they are too big/tall. I have bred to bring down the size, which I did, but the results have been some ugly birds. Previously I had power, beautiful feather, but a little "leggy".... a nice looking Helmet. Now what I see, created by many, they have narrow faces, down set and little feather power. They may have shorter legs but this seems to produce poorer fertility. So, have we created an even harder Helmet to raise? How do we get new members to enjoy a breed that is hard to raise? I have noticed at our shows a bird that stands correctly but is a little tall is often overlooked in favor of a bird that stands like a duck but is "short"....which is really the better bird? I have always enjoyed being together at the shows and winning really is not a concern but I would like to hear what membership thinks of my concerns. I would also like to hear that Kip Huffman has been paid for his birds....to date he has NOT!

Secretary's Report

The club is financial sound but membership is low. Hopefully for 2022 and beyond our club will grow. I look forward to seeing you at the National and will have your 2022 band orders with me. If you have not purchased or reserved bands and would like to get them please let me know BEFORE the National and I can bring them with me. Looking forward to being together at the National!

District 1 Report

By K. Mike LaCom

The LAPC Pageant and our Western Sectional for 2021 was at a new location for all of us this show season...Victorville. Personally I have attended Pageants in Glendale, Pomona, Riverside, Ontario and San Bernardino and now Victorville! This was our first show in Southern California since 2018 due to the bird flu and U know what other flu/virus! LAPC had two show halls available....numbers for a Pageant were low...only a 2 day show vs. the traditional 3 day event and not on the traditional weekend before Thanksgiving. However, it was good to have a show and see many good friends. A big thanks to Leonard for judging MFC's and Bob Bollinger for judging the MFPH's. Also it was great to see Jake Jakabosky make the effort to drive down from Oregon and show some MFC's. It is my understanding that future Pageants will likely be back to the traditional dates and probably at the Victorville location.

Personally I did raise enough, especially with my neighbor situation, fewer is in my future. Hopefully the project Chet, Leonard and James are involved with might save me. Fewer feeders would free up much needed space for me to continue to enjoy Helmets!

District 2 Report

District 2 news

Very quiet here on the District 2 front. We've had a year with no competition which really now equates to two years. Our shows seem to be struggling to get back up and running, I am confident they will make it but it is difficult for them. Some of us were able to make it to the Salt Lake Western Sectional which gave us a little shot but it was still a hard season without our regular shows. I've had occasion to visit with most of the District 2 guys over the past 6 months. Brian and Jake have both raised some young, Jim is getting off to his usual late but also usual successful breeding season. Hank has been hotter than hell over in the Yakima valley so he has been struggling but he's getting some birds out. I had a rough start to the year but have pulled out MFPH wise. My SF just did nothing.. Nothing at all I have one of each. With probably six pair supposedly working. Better loft management required. We are hoping for a District show, it will depend on the fanciers up in Puget Sound that run that club. See you in Texas.

District 8 Report

by James Jensen

DISTRICT 8 REPORT

Here we are in August, the end of the breeding season. I've still got five young helmets in the nest for about two weeks longer. My breeding season has been better than last year, but still a far cry from what I had hoped for.

In 1991 when I first moved to Kaysville I had about 20 breeding pairs of helmets. I banded 150 helmets that year, no feeders. Probably my greatest frustration with helmets over the years has been the decline in parenting ability in the medium face crested.

A few years ago Chet Edmunds in California got frustrated as well and decided to do something about it. He started crossing other breeds into the helmets in an attempt to bring back those parenting instincts. It's a long difficult process. A couple of years ago I got some of his crosses and joined him. I can't say that I have made a big breakthrough but I do see some glimmer of success coming.

I have attached three photos of crosses that I feel are making progress this year.

Photo # 1 is a yellow hen, very cleanly marked, could use more crest and needs more width in head. Photo # 2 is a black cock. You can't see it but he has a nice black tail. His body is good, his head is well formed and he has a great crest and a nice clear beak. Yes he has a bull eye. I expect that that will go away when I can put the color on the head like the yellow hen.

Photo #3 is a dun squeaker out of the same pair as the yellow. He is well marked, shows signs of a good crest and I hope a good body.

None of these are perfect, but they are progressing. All were raised by their own parents. Now we'll have to see if they will be good parents in the next generation.

Chet has many more than I do. We are both hoping to have showable helmets that raise their own young in the near future.

Hope you've had a good breeding season. Perhaps we'll see you at a show.

AORC catch all or carefully judged class.

I have wanted to write this article for a while. The thought always comes up for me this time of year as I am sorting the new young, working to identify their best traits from station to color. The AORC youngsters, in my case mostly almond and almond sub colors are hard to class if you are not familiar with the almond color family. I have been entering these birds in competition over the last 45 years in varying stages of color quality. The problem for me is that so many of the the Judges don't recognize the difference between good quality presentation of the AORC and poor quality presentation of the AORC so they disregard the pigeon's color and only judge on conformation and station. I call it the "its just aorc so" syndrome. By doing that they are denying the bird it's 10 color points. The AHA recognizes All Other Recognized Colors. Which means that while there is not a standard description of the color it is incumbent on the Judge to be versed in the color and judge it accordingly. The Judge should grade the color presentation and award somewhere between 0 and 10 points for the bird.

AHA Standard: RECOGNIZED COLOR CLASSES - Black, Blue, Recessive Red, Ash Red, Spread Ash Red and their respective dilutes; Dun, Silver, Yellow, Ash Yellow, Spread Ash Yellow and AORC .

A.O.R.C. (All Other Recognized Colors) - All other established colors and/or patterns such as Brown, Khaki, Indigo, Almond, Checker, etc. not listed above as recognized colors, NOT to include birds which are mis-marked or a poor example of a recognized color.

"NOT to include birds which are mis-marked or a poor example of a recognized color.", is one of the problems we face. The almond sub varieties recognized around the world can look similar to poor quality presentation of some of our standard colors. I try to let the Judge know the intended color of the AORC birds as having only the top of the head and the tail color presented can provide a real challenge. I would like to see that become a part of our judging tradition going forward. Simply informing the judge of the intended color he is judging in the AORC class. We do that now with our standard colors by announcing the color class "young yellow hens" etc.. If there are enough of a certain AORC color age and sex to make up a class I would suppose that would make it easier but most of the time the AORCs are lumped together by age and sex, which is correct by our standard as only one AORC YH, YC, OH, OC can make it to the final line up but makes it hard for the Judge to know what he is Judging. The fix for now is to simply inform the Judge what color the bird has been entered as. I try to write that on my entry so that it moves forward on the judging sheets. I would like to see the show Secretary take a moment and let the Judge know what the breeder's intent is. In my case that keeps me from appearing to be trying to let the Judge know who's bird it is. The Almond Sub Varieties offer some confusing examples. The Kite and it's dilute Golden Dun could also be very bad quality Recessive Red on barred birds. A poor almond and a deroy in helmets can be hard to discern. Separating Brown and Dun on a Helmet would be very difficult. Indigo is another that we haven't seen much of but it would really help the judging if the Judge was pre informed. If the Show Secretary can notify the Judge about what he is about to see it would be so helpful.

Once the Judge has been given fair chance to know what helmet marked colors he has to award the AORC birds their points, then it is up to him to have the sufficient working knowledge to do that job as we don't have a description for him in our standard. Judges should be selected based on their ability to consider the quality of Other Recognized Colors as well as the entire Helmet.

AHA CERTIFIED JUDGES - CODE OF RULES 1. A thorough working knowledge of the Helmet breed and its current Standard. 3. Sufficient knowledge of color genetics to readily identify qualities of pigmentation.
